

Paddy Greene

The Comedians' comedian

Known as the Comics' comic, this zany Irishman, and former drummer, is overflowing with a talent for making people laugh, like the late Tommy Cooper, a naturally funny man.

Paddy's act is full of vitality, he uses so much energy that he is usually physically drained at the end of a performance, and uses every available inch of space, and anything to hand as a prop. A skill he learnt whilst fronting the well acclaimed, and very popular "Paddy Greene Set".

Much of his material is fresh and topical, even old stories take on a complete new angle with Paddy's unique approach. In fact Paddy is so imaginative that you will probably never see him perform the same act twice!

He was a great favourite with Jim Davidson, who took many opportunities to use Paddy on his special shows.

After appearing on Summertime Special, in 1989, the LWT staff immediately booked him for their Christmas party, and then again for the year following, indeed a high accolade.

After many years of persuasion, Paddy finally presented his talent at a Sportsman's Dinner - the result was a standing ovation - PADDY GREENE had exploded onto the After Dinner Circuit.

Many more bookings followed, along with more ovations, and we saw Paddy become established as one of the most sought after comedy speakers.

Quotes :-

Jim Davidson, " the funniest man I have seen in years"

Gary Bushell, "the undoubted star of the show was an unknown Irishman who had the theatre in uproar." (The theatre in question was the London Palladium, also on the bill was Bernard Manning, Jim Bowen, Jim Davidson, Jethro and Hilary O Neil)
